

Inclusive Narratives of Management History

Embracing Cultural Tradition: Historic Business Activity by Native People in The Western United States.

Join us for an enlightening session that is part of the Inclusive Narratives of Management History series in the Management History Division of AOM.

- Date and Time: March 18, 2024, from 12 NOON - 12:45 PM (EDT)
- Venue: Online - <https://us02web.zoom.us/meeting/register/tZ0pdOusqTwqGdSIXjuttLluoTKoEDn-Rtrt>
- Speaker: Dr. Joseph Scott Gladstone
- Dr. Gladstone's scholarship explores culturally relevant management education, notably the intersection of western-influenced management science and Native American and Indigenous Peoples cultures, and management education strategies utilizing cooperative extension services. His internationally recognized work explores transplanar wisdom, a foundational Native American and Indigenous philosophy, and its influences on organization management, efficiency, and ethics. His work is published in Academy of Management Learning & Education, Leadership, The Journal of Management Education, American Indian Quarterly, and American Indian Culture and Research Journal, Oxford Handbook, and many other journals and numerous book chapters. He is the editor of IBAPA: the Indigenous Business and Public Administration Journal, and co-edited American Indian Business: Principles and Practice (University of Washington Press). Dr. Gladstone founded the Native and Indigenous Peoples Caucus in the Academy of Management. He is a past president of the Ph.D. Project Management Doctoral Students Association and serves as one of their faculty advisors.
